Editor's Note

These few lines, written with Open Office in Times New Roman 14 on a Mac OS X, will be probably the only ones of this massive, almost sculptural book that you, my reader, will actually read. Not that the following 1,700 pages are not worth reading – quite the contrary; but reading them will probably turn out to be an herculean effort, a performative gesture that requires dedication and time, and that won't give you the kind of gratification that usually the act of reading provides.

More likely, you will go through these pages, looking at how the text is formatted, how it flows through the book, and reading short samples here and there, as if it were the phone book, or a huge archive catalogue.

In doing it, you may be comforted by the fact that this text was not originally intended for human eyes. To put it together, artist Martin Howse used a small custom script to extract from an IBM x60 in daily use each chunk of data which had changed within the file system from the previous day's image, and wrote it to a new file. This operation was performed on a daily basis for the entire month of June 2011.

Excluding binary data, one day's sedimentation has been published in this book. In other words, Diff in June tells a day in the life of a personal computer, written by itself in its own language, as a sort of private log or intimate diary focused on every single change to the data on its hard disk. As the author writes in the presentation of the project, the book is "a novel of data archaeology in progress tracking the overt and the covert, merging the legal and illegal (file-sharing), personal and administrative, source code and frozen systematics." And, we could add, it's an extreme manifestation of the archival impulse, that brings Howse to mimic the way of thinking and behaving of a computing machine: keeping track of everything that happens in it.

In the context of Martin Howse's body of work, Diff in June is part of a series of projects called Data Sedimentation*, that "treats the user's hard drive and local memory as a surface for constant excavation" and "promotes methodologies of computational self-display." The series started in 2006 with* self3*, a program that creates a visual self-portrait of its own activities within the machine's central processing unit (CPU); and continued in the following years with projects like* self examination (2011), a software that translates CPU/machine code registers starting and running a specific process into audio, and ptraces of death*, that attempts to trace the termination of a given process, such* as the Firefox web browser, using the common "ptrace" system call and uses the data logs to generate an audio file.

All these projects reveal an interest in the life (and death) of a computer, and more extensively of electronic technologies, in relationship with the environment and the human mind, that is key to all the artist's work. Born in London in 1969, Martin Howse defines himself a programmer, writer, performer and explorer. He is a co-founder of micro_research, a mobile research platform active in London, Berlin, and Peenemünde, "exploring psychogeophysics and asking the question of where precisely the plague known as software executes." His interest in technological animism and in psychogeophysics – defined as "an investigation of different methods for exploring the relations between code, materials (the earth) and the psyche", brought him to conceive an "earth computer", an ambitious environmental computational work that takes power supply and instructions to boot directly from the earth, and that is driven by environmental factors. The project manifests itself into an ongoing series of performances, workshops, lectures, fieldtrips, environmental interventions and other experimental situations.

A last note to the reader. This books exists in two forms: as a freely downloadable pdf and as a print-on-demand paperback. If you are reading these lines on a screen, you probably have in your hands the full version of the book: a pdf of about 1,700 pages. Unfortunately, the production and distribution model we adopted for the paperback doesn't allow to turn all these bits into ink on paper. To be printed by Lulu.com and distributed by Amazon.com, a book has to fit into 740 pages. Bad for us, but good for trees. So, after discussing this issue with the author, we decided to stick to the material limitations and production constraints of the standardized production and distribution system we are using. The book starts at the very beginning, and interrupts when it reaches page 740 of the file. Of course, if you bought the paperback version and you feel defrauded, you can still download the pdf file and complete our work, making your own customized version of the book. Enjoy!

It is easily possible to put together a CCD powered telescope that is more than adequate for hunting comets or prospecting for asteroids. Both are very popular pastimes and the optical hardware can be augmented by a substantial range of free software to process the raw images and guide amateur astronomers on where to look and what to see. short fortune-cookie sayings. When I wrote this code, I used Japanese/English sentence pairs about cats, because I was studying Japanese. You can use whatever tickles your fancy, as long as this text file (~/taglines.txt) has one line per saying. (defun wicked/random-tagline (&optional file) Return a random tagline. (with-current-buffer (find-file-noselect (or file ~/taglines.txt)) (goto-char (random (point-max))) (let ((string (buffer-substring (line-beginning-position) (line-end-position)))) string))) (eval-after-load 'remember '(progn (defadvice remember (after wicked activate) Add random tagline. (save-excursion (goto-char (point-max)) (insert (wicked/random-tagline)))))) If you want multi-line sayings, look into the Emacs fortune cookie package, and replace wicked/random-tagline with a function that returns a random string. This code modifies the behavior of C-c r (remember) by inserting a random tagline after the buffer has been prepared. You can use the same idea to insert a timestamp noting you started, a template figuring or modify the text in other ways. Saving to Different Places You can also change how Remember saves its notes. For example, if you want all of the notes that contain the word :EMACS: or :WORK: to go into separate files, you can add this code to your ~/.emacs: (defvar wicked/remember-keywords '((:EMACS: . ~/emacs.txt) (:WORK: . ~/work.txt)) List of (REGEXP . FILENAME). If an entry matches REGEXP, it will be storied in FILENAME. The first regular expression that matches is used.) (eval-after-load 'remember '(progn (defadvice remember-region (around wicked activate) Save notes matching `wicked/remember-keywords' elsewhere. (let ((b (or beg (min (point) (or (mark) (point-min))))) (e (or end (max (point) (or (mark) (point-max))))) (string (buffer-substring-no-properties b e)) (done nil) (keywords wicked/remember-keywords)) (while keywords (when (string-match (caar keywords) string) (let ((remember-data-file (cdar keywords))) ad-do-it) (setq keywords nil done t)) (setq keywords (cdr keywords))) (unless done ad-do-it))))) You can even configure Remember to use different handler functions. This chapter covers several note-taking systems for Emacs, and you may want to use Remember to save to more than one note-taking system. For example, you can set up C-c r p to start a Remember buffer that saves to Planner, and C-c r o to start a Remember buffer that saves to Org. Here's the code for your ~/.emacs: (defun wicked/remember-to-org () Remember to Org. (let ((remember-annotation-functions ;; (1) (cons 'org-remember-annotation remember-annotation-functions))) (remember) (set (make-variable-buffer-local 'remember-handler-functions) '(org-remember-handler)))) ;; (2) (defun wicked/remember-to-planner () Remember to Planner. (let ((remember-annotation-functions ;; (3) (append planner-annotation-functions remember-annotation-functions))) (remember) (set (make-variable-buffer-local 'remember-handler-functions) '(remember-planner-append)))) ;; (4) (global-unset-key (kbd C-c r)) ;; (5) (global-set-key (kbd C-c r o) 'wicked/remember-to-org) (global-set-key (kbd C-c r p) 'wicked/remember-to-planner) 1: We need to make sure that Org-compatible links are created. 2: This makes C-c C-c save the note to the Org file. 3: Planner uses a list of annotation functions, so we add all of them to the beginning of the list. 4: This makes C-c C-c save the note to the Planner page. 5: We need to unset keyboard shortcuts before we can set longer keyboard shortcuts that start with the same sequence. To learn more about configuring Remember with the different note-taking systems, read on! On Technorati: wickedcoolemacs, book, emacs, remember Random Emacs symbol: compilation-find-file - Function: Find a buffer for file FILENAME. ?ls. I prefer Org's outline-editing commands, and you'll learn about them in the Outline Notes with Org section. Here's a quick summary. First, you need to switch the buffer to Org mode by typing M-x org-mode. To automatically open your notes file in Org mode, add -- mode: org -- to the first line of your ~/notes.txt. Then, when you open your ~/notes.txt file, it will be in Org mode. You can quickly collapse or expand all the outline entries by pressing S-TAB (org-shifttab). To collapse or expand a single entry, move the point to the headline (the line beginning with *, , or any number of asterisks), then press TAB (org-cycle). To move an entry up or down, move the point to the headline and press S-UP (org-shiftup) or S-DOWN (org-shiftdown). To demote or promote a heading, press M-RIGHT (org-metaright) or M-LEFT (org-metaleft). You can treat ~/notes.txt as your inbox, and keep your organized notes in another file or groups of files. Cut and paste the text between the files to clear your inbox, and use M-x grep to search multiple files. Alternatively, you can keep all of your notes in one large text file, and use C-s (isearch-forward) and M-x occur to search for information. Now you know the basics of remembering information, saving it into a file, and reviewing the file. By default, Remember annotates your notes with a filename, if you were looking at a file when you called C-c r (remember). As you learn more about Emacs, you may want to configure Remember to add more intelligent annotations and other text to the Remember buffer. The more work Remember does for you, the less work you have to do! Enabling annotation functions The easiest way to get Remember to automatically understand mail messages, Web pages, info files, BBDB contact records, and other sources of information in Emacs is to use either Org or Planner. To learn how to integrate Remember with either Org or Planner, read the section on Outline Your Notes with Org and Writing Your Journal with Planner. You can also define your own annotation functions. When you call C-c r (remember) from a buffer, Remember goes through each of the functions in remember-annotation-functions, and it uses the first non-nil value returned. For example, you may work with many temporary buffers that don't have filenames. To create an annotation function that adds buffer names, add the following code to your ~/.emacs after the basic Remember configuration code: (eval-after-load 'remember '(progn (add-to-list 'remember-annotation-functions 'buffer-name t))) This adds buffer-named guerry/u/org-registry.el High Acid "Hot Bath" Home Preserving - Green Living Australia Recipe : Heinie hurtin hot sauces from around the world Cookbook:Coriander Chutney - Wikibooks, collection of open-content textbooks Power - SWR meter with AD8307 Eclipse to Emacs: Navigating your source tree | sacha chua :: enterprise 2.0 consultant, storyteller, geek eAcoustic cryptanalysis Talk:Circuit Idea/Walking along the Resistive Film - Wikibooks, collection of open-content textbooks fischl.de - AVRUSBBoot - USB bootloader for Atmel AVR controllers AVR USB - A Firmware-Only USB Driver for Atmel AVR Microcontrollers USB bootloaders for AVR microcontrollers - Scientific, embedded, biomedical, electronics contents.
