PREFACE AND ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Picasso was seventy-five years old last October. This exhibition, organized by the Museum of Modern Art with the support of the Art Institute of Chicago and the Philadelphia Museum of Art, contributes to the celebration of his anniversary.

The exhibition was originally planned to show Picasso’s art since his Guernica mural of 1937. It would thus simply have supplemented the retrospective Picasso show of 1939. However, since 1939 a whole new generation has come to maturity. For its sake and to make possible a comparative study of Picasso’s art throughout his prodigious career, the scope of the exhibition has been extended to include some sixty years of work.

Though the period covered is half again as long, the present survey is not so systematically comprehensive as that of 1939. For lack of space, certain media, notably prints and ceramics, have been entirely omitted. This has made room for the largest showing in America of Picasso’s rather neglected sculpture and a generous number of drawings. Most of the important sculptures so far released by the artist, as well as many lesser works, are included. Had the many major pieces still in Picasso’s possession been available (as was expected), the artist would, I believe, have been revealed as one of the great sculptors of our time. His brilliance and power as a draftsman are demonstrated by the seventy drawings selected from American collections by William S. Lieberman.

Picasso’s American amateurs will find many well-known canvases in the exhibition. This was inevitable, since it seemed essential to include certain capital paintings no matter how familiar. Besides, in the novel context of unaccustomed and challenging neighbors, even the often-seen canvas may display unexpected qualities.

Many paintings and drawings have never before been exhibited in America. Some in fact are almost unknown even to students of Picasso. For instance the Woman in Blue, page 16, was shown at the Madrid Bellas Artes exhibition of 1901 and may even be the first Picasso to enter a public museum, yet it languished for nearly fifty years almost forgotten and quite unpublished until recently. Painted perhaps in the same year, the Self Portrait, page 13, has, it appears, never before been reproduced. It was bought in 1911 from the Thannhauser Gallery, Munich, by Hugo von Hofmannsthal with royalties from his libretto for Der Rosenkavalier. In 1907, while he was at work on Les Demoiselles d’Avignon, Picasso painted an elaborate and unique composition in full fauve color, The Harvesters, page 32, which he gave to his old friend, Sebastián Junyer, of Barcelona, where the painting remained until last year. The Jug and Bowl, page 32, Picasso gave to Matisse in 1907-08, repeating the gesture almost forty years later with a still life of 1944, page 93. Both are published here apparently for the first time.

The exhibition welcomes four of the most notable cubist pictures to this country, the Girl with Mandolin, page 38, recently acquired by a New York collector, and three loans not seen here before, the Aficionado, from the Basle Museum, page 41, the Woman in an Armchair, page 45, and the Portrait of a Girl, page 46, the last lent by that admirable connoisseur of twentieth-century art, the Director of the National Museums of France. With these should be mentioned the exquisite oval still life, page 44, from the collection of the National Gallery of Norway.

At the heart of the cubist section may be found a concentration of collages, pages 42-44, rivaled in number only by the neo-classic "miniatures" of the early 1920s, pages 54-55. By contrast with these two groups, the large number of portraits was quite unplanned. The famous portrait of Sebastián Junyer, page 18; the youthful self portraits, pages 13, 17 and 29; the artist's early patrons, Leo and Gertrude Stein, page 29, Wilhelm Uhde, page 39, and Dr. Claribel Cone, page 54; two of his pioneer dealers, Daniel-Henry Kahnweiler, page 39, and Ambroise Vollard, page 48, Diaghilev, who commissioned most of his ballet designs, page 48; the charming portrayals of his children, Paul, page 60, Maya, page 82, and Claude, page 98; the affectionate if vertiginous mask of his faithful friend and biographer, Jaime Sabartés, page 82, the formidable intensity of his little daughter Paloma at play, page 99; the witty bravura of the two portraits of Madame H.P., page 104, and the proud profile of Jacqueline Roque, page 110; all these images of friends offer evidence that, as in the past, the greatest portraits were painted by the greatest artists rather than by specialists.

The largest number of works previously unseen in America date of course from the most recent third of Picasso's career, the period since Guernica. Besides the portraits reviewed above, one may take special note of the famous pair of still lifes with a bull's head, page 81, the large Serenade, lent by the Musée d'Art Moderne, the bitterly humorous cycle of drawings, pages 106-107, the fifteen variations on a theme by Delacroix, pages 9 and 108-109, the little view of Vallauris with smoke pouring from its ceramic furnaces, page 97, and, dating from last year, the large seated figures and studio interiors, pages 110-114, works which bear witness to the sustained invention and vitality of the artist now in his 75th year, the man who by a coincidence of anniversaries, can look back exactly 20 years to his Guernica and 50 years to Les Demoiselles d'Avignon.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The recent triumphal procession of large Picasso retrospective exhibitions began in the museums of Rome and Milan in 1953, followed by Lyons and São Paulo in 1954, and the series of 75th birthday exhibitions in Paris and Munich in 1955, Cologne, Hamburg, Moscow and Oslo in 1956. The consequent and very natural exhaustion of lenders (not to mention the works of art!) have added to the already very great sense of gratitude and indebtedness felt by the three American museums toward those whose generosity and collaboration have contributed to the exhibition.

First of all, on behalf of the Trustees of The Art Institute of Chicago, The Philadelphia Museum of Art* and The Museum of Modern Art, we should like to thank M. Pablo Picasso for his support of the exhibition and his loan of no less than thirty works in addition to the Guernica mural and its studies.

Picasso's representative, M. Daniel-Henry Kahnweiler and his associates of the Galerie Louise Leiris, particularly Mme Leiris herself, and M. Maurice Jardot have been most self-sacrificing in working with both Picasso and the Museum of Modern Art during the very difficult period when the gallery was moving to a new location and opening its own show of Picasso's recent painting. Mr. Kahnweiler, scholar, dealer and one of Picasso's staunchest champions, is, in this season of anniversaries, celebrating his 50th year of association with the artist. In New York, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Saidenberg of the Saidenberg Gallery, helpful in many ways, have been particularly considerate in postponing their exhibition of Picasso's latest paintings so that it would not anticipate the Museum's show.

Besides the generous lenders who are listed on pages 8, 11, we cordially thank the following:

— for their help in securing loans from museums: Mr. Gordon M. Smith, Director, The Albright Art Gallery, Buffalo; Mrs. Adelyn D. Breeskin, Director, and Miss Gertrude Rosenthal, Senior Curator, The Baltimore Museum of Art; Mr.
Charles Nagel, Director, and Mr. William N. Eisendrath, Jr., Assistant Director,
The City Art Museum of St. Louis; Professor Wolfgang Stechow, The Dudley
Peter Allen Memorial Art Museum, Oberlin College; Mr. John Coolidge, Director,
The Fogg Art Museum, Harvard University; Mr. Arnold Rüdlinger, Curator, Kunsthalle, Basle; Dr. R. Wohrl, Director, KunsthauS, Zürich; Dr. Georg Schmidt, Director, Kunstmuseum, Basle; M. Georges A. Salles, Director, The Louvre and the National Museums of France; Mr. James J. Rorimer, Director, and Mr. Theodore Rousseau, Curator of Paintings, The Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York; M. Jean Cassou, Chief Curator, and M. Bernard Dorival, Curator, Musée National d'Art Moderne, Paris; Don Enrique Lafuente y Ferrari, Director, Museo de Arte Moderno, Madrid; Dr. Sigurd Willoch, Director, and Mr. Leif Oestby, Keeper, Nasjonalgalleriet, Oslo; Mrs. Ala Story, Director, The Santa Barbara Museum of Art; Mr. Blake-More Godwin, Director, The Toledo Museum of Art; Mr. John Reid of the Cultural Affairs Offices, U. S. Embassy, Madrid; Mr. Charles C. Cunnigham, Director, The Wadsworth Atheneum, Hartford

— for their help in securing loans from private owners: Dr. P. Bouffard, Director, Musée d'Art et d'Histoire, Geneva; Mme Marie Cattoli; Mr. Niels Ebbesen; Mr.
Victor W. Ganz; Mr. Otto M. Gerson; Mr. Pierre Matisse; Mr. Klaus Perls; Miss

*The Philadelphia Museum will open the exhibition, with certain changes, in January, 1958.
Joyce Reeves; Mr. John Rewald; Mr. Per Rom; Mr. Paul Rosenberg; Mr. Jaime Sabartés; Mr. Sam Salz; Mr. and Mrs. Javier Vilato

—for their help in providing information or photographs: Mr. Sidney Janis; Mr. Henry Kleeleman; Dr. Otto Kallir; M. Knoedler & Co.; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Kootz; Prof. José López-Rey; Mr. Frederick Mayor; Mr. and Mrs. Roland Penrose; Mr. Antoni Ribera; Mr. Germain Seligman; Mr. James Thrall Soby; Mr. Soichi Sunami; Mr. Justin K. Thannhauser; Mrs. G. David Thompson; Miss Jane Wade; Mrs. Florence Walters; Dr. Fernanda Wittgens

At the moment when this preface must go to the press certain important loans are still in doubt. Whether they are granted or not we should like to thank His Excellency, Georgi N. Zaroubin, Ambassador of the U.S.S.R., and Madame Tamara G. Mamedov, the Acting Cultural Attaché, for their efforts to secure the loan of ten paintings from the collections of the Hermitage Museum in Leningrad and the Pushkin Museum in Moscow; Dr. Juan Ainaud de Lasarte, Director of the Municipal Art Museums of Barcelona, for his part in negotiating loans from the Museo de Arte Moderno in Barcelona; and Mr. and Mrs. Joan Junyer for their generous, painstaking help in requesting loans from Don Sebastián Junyer Vidal of Barcelona.

I have also to thank my cooperative colleagues in the three museums associated as partners in the exhibition: Mr. Daniel Catton Rich, Director, Mrs. Katharine Kuh, Curator of Modern Painting and Sculpture, and Mr. Carl O. Schniewind, Curator of Prints and Drawings, all of The Art Institute of Chicago; Mr. Henri Marceau, Director, and Mr. Henry Clifford, Curator of Paintings, of The Philadelphia Museum of Art; Mr. René d'Harnoncourt, Director, Mr. Monroe Wheeler, Director of Exhibitions and Publications, and Mr. James Platt White, Special Assistant to the Director, of the Museum of Modern Art.

Mr. William S. Lieberman, Curator of Prints at the Museum of Modern Art, has not only organized the important drawing section of the exhibition but has been my right hand in many other ways; he has been ably assisted by the staff of the Print Room, Miss Dorothy L. Lytle, Assistant Curator, and Miss Edith Herman, Assistant. Mrs. E. Powis Jones has generously given many weeks of volunteer service in assembling photographs. My secretary, Miss Marie Alexander, with the help of Miss Betsy Jones, Secretary of the Museum Collections, have tirelessly borne the brunt of correspondence. Miss Dorothy C. Miller, Curator, and Miss Sara Mazo, Assistant Curator of the Museum Collections, have helped in installation; Miss Dorothy H. Dudley, Registrar, Miss Frances Permas, Publications Manager, and Mrs. Elizabeth Shaw, Director of Publicity, indispensable pillars of all the Museum's exhibitions, have performed exceptionally arduous tasks in this one, as has the Museum's typographer, Mr. Charles Oscar. All have devoted to the exhibition, or its catalog, time and hard work far beyond their ordinary duties.

These thanks would be incomplete without acknowledging indebtedness to three publications which have proven indispensable in assembling and documenting the exhibition: the great catalogue by Christian Zervos which reproduces most of Picasso’s work up through 1937; the catalogue of the grand Picasso retrospective presented in the Palazzo Reale, Milan, 1953; and the exemplary catalogue raisonné prepared by Maurice Jardot for the exhibition of Picasso’s paintings presented under M. Jardot’s direction at the Musée des Arts Décoratifs, Paris, in 1955.

This catalogue is simply a record of the exhibition. With it the Museum of Modern Art is publishing Portrait of Picasso, an admirable and richly illustrated documentation of Picasso’s life by his friend, Roland Penrose. Among other books in English on Picasso now in print four general studies and one on his early period may be listed along with Mr. Penrose’s work:

- Frank Elgar and Robert Maillard, Picasso, Frederick A. Praeger, New York, 1956
- Maurice Raynal, Picasso, Skira, New York, 1953

Almost all of the works in this catalogue will be shown in both New York and Chicago. Most of them will also be shown in Philadelphia but for the exhibition opening in that city in January certain works will be replaced and revisions made in the catalogue.

CATALOGUE AND PLATES

Self Portrait. (1901). Oil on canvas, 29 x 23 3/4". Private collection, New York

The arrangement is approximately chronological.
Whenever feasible the relative size of the reproductions within each double-page spread reflects approximately the relative size of the works themselves.
Because of lack of space or late arrival of photographs some works included in the exhibition could not be illustrated. References are given to reproductions of these works in other publications.
The place where the work was done and the date are given without parentheses if these data occur on the work itself and appear to be by the artist's hand. Data drawn from other sources are placed in parentheses.
Dimensions are given in inches; height precedes width.

Guernica, the ancient capital of the Basque people in northern Spain, was largely destroyed on April 27th, 1937 by German bombers flying for General Franco. It was the first "saturation" bombing of a city in military history.

Some months earlier Picasso had been commissioned to paint a mural in the Spanish Republic building at the Paris World's Fair. He had done nothing about it until the news of the Guernica catastrophe aroused him to a fury of action. On May 1st he made the first sketches; on May 10 he began to paint; in June the mural was installed.

There have been many and often contradictory interpretations of the Guernica. Picasso himself has denied it any political significance stating simply that the mural expresses his abhorrence of war and brutality.

The Guernica and the studies and "postscripts" listed below are lent by the artist. Almost all are reproduced in Guernica by Juan Larrea, New York, Curt Valentin, 1947.

The Women of Algiers, after Delacroix

In Paris between December 13, 1954 and February 14, 1955, Picasso painted 15 canvases based upon Delacroix's Les Femmes d'Alger (1834) now in the Louvre. The whole series was brought to the United States by Mr. and Mrs. Victor W. Ganz of New York, who retain the final as well as several earlier versions. All 15 have been reassembled for the present exhibition. Of these, nine are illustrated here, the final version, "O," in color, on page 9. The complete series is reproduced in the catalogue of the Picasso 1955 exhibition, Musée des Arts Décoratifs, Paris, where they were first shown and listed by letter, "A" through "O." All are painted in oil on canvas and dated on the back by the artist.
