Detelinara is a neighborhood in Novi Sad, Serbia, and it is known for its rich cultural history and diverse community. The area was originally inhabited by the Western Illyrians and later on became a settlement for the Serbs who moved from the Danube Valley. The name "Detelinara" comes from the Serbo-Croatian word "detelina", which means "sandbar", and refers to the location of the neighborhood on the river Sava. The area was strategicallyImportant to the city because it controlled the main waterway for transportation and trade. Due to its location, Detelinara was able to become a center for various industries and businesses. The neighborhood is also known for its vibrant community life, with numerous cafes, restaurants, and shops located in close proximity to each other. The area is popular among locals and tourists alike, with many people enjoying the cozy atmosphere and friendly vibe of the neighborhood. The architecture of Detelinara is also unique, with a mix of traditional and modern styles that reflect the rich history of the area. Overall, Detelinara is a dynamic and thriving neighborhood that is an important part of Novi Sad's cultural landscape.